

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The method and apparatus for shoreline land mass reclamation which includes replacement of at least one groyne section along a shoreline wherein the section includes a pair of spaced stanchions which are connected by at least one linkage member which supports vertically extending baffle elements and wherein the at least one linkage member is pivotably connected such that the spaced stanchions may be vertically adjustable relative to one another.